

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method and a device detect lane changing operations for a vehicle. This involves determining at least one observation variable which describes the lane changing behavior of an observed other vehicle. A lane changing variable which characterizes a lane changing intention of the other vehicle on the basis of a roadway lane assigned to the other vehicle is determined in dependence on the at least one observation variable.